From Tank #77 to Taber

Taber started as Tank #77 in the late 1800s, where homesteaders and Mormons settled from the United States. A little hamlet located alongside the railway, with the main economy being coal mining. It was when the Canadian Pacific Railway (CPR) established a post office, the name was changed to Tabor. However, the paperwork returned with the name spelt 'Taber'. Incorporated on July 1, 1907, the hamlet in Southeast Alberta officially became Taber.

Taber thrived on coal mining, but by 1913 the industry dramatically declined. Throughout the 1920s, Taber's economy reinvigorated itself through extensive irrigation development. While crops grew without fear of drought, the agricultural economy grew to what we see today.

From mining to crops, and oil in the 1930s, the economy became less reliant on agriculture as its sole economic driver. Agricultural and oil and gas industries created a stable economy within the community. And today, families of all ages gather at sunny city parks, attend lively festivals, indulge in local cuisine, and create memories in a place that was once identified as a number.

Cornfest

August 22-24, 2024

The largest free, family-friendly festival in Western Canada

Every second last weekend in August, people visit Taber in large numbers from near and far for Cornfest. A two-day festival that features live music and entertainment, thrilling fireworks, food trucks, a chili cook off, amusement park, car show, and Taber corn.

Famous from coast to coast, Taber and District Chamber of Commerce host the annual event to celebrate the well-loved vegetable. At Confederation Park, many family-friendly activities are complemented with buttery corn on the cob, grown right in Taber, Alberta, the Corn Capital of Canada.

There is also a corn stuffing contest, corn eating contest, and corn tasting contest.

Taber's long hot sunny summer days result in a much sweeter corn than most other varieties, and is sold at corn stands across Alberta. A Farmer's Market rule guide that says anyone who advertises their corn as "Taber Corn" needs to provide proof.

Hosted by Taber and District Chamber of Commerce.
